

The paper proposes an identification procedure for autoregressive Gaussian stationary stochastic processes under the assumption that the manifest (or observed) variables are nearly independent when conditioned on a limited number of latent (or hidden) variables. The method exploits the sparse plus low-rank decomposition of the inverse of the manifest spectral density and the efficient convex relaxations recently proposed for such decompositions.