

The biodiversity of coral reefs is globally estimated to be represented by around 950.000 multicellular species and only 10% of them have been described .

These numbers indicate the vast gap in our present knowledge of coral reef biodiversity