

The cartoon presentation draws attention to an important issue : how human sympathy for a very select number of attractive animals has become the dominant factor determining support for biodiversity conservation today , raising the problem of how to protect less attractive species.