

Phyllagathis indica is described as a new taxon from the Kuttikkanam Hills, Kerala section of the southern Western Ghats, India. The genus is new to the flora of India and hence has much phytogeographical significance. The diagnostic morphological characters, distribution, conservation status and images of the new species are presented in this paper.