

An ecosystem is a community of plants and animals which coexist with water, soil and sun.

But how can these elements be combined in a farming system which is primarily concerned with the need to produce both food and profit

